

After my declaration of independence I have been involved in an exchange of emails with an old friend of mine. He's still in the Sea Org. In this exchange he brought up the matter of the no-child-rule in the Sea Org..

We got into a discussion about this rule (order) and he wanted to explain to me why it came about, what it said etc. He didn't think I understood it and said it was not as insane as I claimed it to be.

And I was close to get drawn into a right and wrong-situation with him as I came up with this question: "Is it Scientology?"

I was so pleased with myself. :)

That's the thing, isn't it - you don't argue and discuss an auditing command to see if it is right or not, there is no need to argue about the non-ex formula.

And still he wanted to discuss this - was it pro survival or not that parents were offloaded? Right or wrong?

The question is: Is it Scientology or is it something else?

Örnen har landat
22 Jan 2010